AN AMERICAN RALLYING SONG.
Our friend John McCreary, the editor of the Palace Journal, has written one of the most patriotic rallying songs it has been our good fortune to come across since the nomination...

Fillmore and Donelson.
Americans! a bugle blast!
The battle has at length begun.
Rest not till your votes are cast.

Fillmore and Donelson.
Fling forth your banner to the breeze.
"God and our Native Land" the cry;
From mountains, valleys, rocks, and trees,
Freemen will answer "Do or die."

Fillmore and Donelson.
The land our fathers dearly won.
If they in solid phalanx stand,
For Fillmore and for DONELSON.

Fillmore and Donelson.
Success must crown the righteous cause.
All FOREIGN influence be rethrown—
And "Liberty and Equal Laws,"
A BYWORD now, a FACT become.

Fillmore and Donelson.
Our country then will honor'd be.
From rising to the setting sun,
Governed by NATIVES pure and free,
By FILLMORE and by DONELSON.

Fillmore and Donelson.
We have just received a letter from a friend in California, upon the fly leaf of which is printed an impudent set of commandments to wives, which we copy below. We make the transcript, however, with fear and trembling, and with a distinct disavowal that such commandments are at all suitable to the wives of Kentuckians, however appropriate and necessary they may be in California:

Now it came to pass, that as thy servant sat alone and at night, watching the dying embers of his cabin fire, beholding the latch of his cabin door was softly lifted, and before him stood an angel clothed in female apparel. As in duty bound, I immediately arose from my stool, and invited her to be seated. This she gracefully declined, but placing her white and beautiful fingers upon the bosom of my woollen shirt, in a voice of musical distinctness, she thus addressed me:

"Young man, hast thou courage?"
I was almost speechless, for I felt what little I possessed fast ebbing away; and I modestly answered that I had none to boast of, yet "dare do all that became a man."

"It is enough," she replied; "I therefore commission thee to give the following—
Commandments to California Wives.

Thou shalt not put on airs of self-importance, nor allow thy vanity and love of dress to turn thy head, and unfit thee for the sober duties of life, or make thee merely an expensive toy and walking advertisement of the latest fashions.

Thou shalt not believe thyself to be an angel—all but the wings,—nor over-estimate thine own and under-estimate thy husband's value, because the scarcity of thy sex leads men to bow, almost in worship, to silk or calico made in woman's garments. Neither shalt thou be intoxicated by the personal attractions and flattering attentions of men with finger rings, fine apparel and prancing horses; nor by the glittering equipage and wonderful promises of the unprincipled and gay gallant—lest thy weakness and folly tempt thee to prefer him to thy husband, and soon, under the plea of "incompatibility of temper," or other phantom of the imagination, thou become dissatisfied, and in the end seek a separation, or pray for a divorce, to gratify thy vain desires, or cover thy sin.

Thou shalt not consider it fashionable, cleanly, or economical, to sweep the streets with one-hundred-dollar dresses—when at home thou didst consider thyself fortunate to get calico; nor shalt thou promenade muddy side-walks in long satia robe and bedraggled underclothes; nor wear jewels and flowers on thy head, while thy feet go "fliperty-click" in buskin shoes run down at the heel, and discover to strangers the holes in thy stockings.

Thou shalt not starve thyself and family twenty-nine days out of thirty, to feast thy circle and give a party; nor by the purchase of expensive gaw-gaws and finery, keep thyself and husband poor; nor run up bills for frills and furbelows, while the dry-goods merchant and thy husband are at their wits' ends how to pay their way; nor spend hard earnings foolishly; nor lose a half-day shopping, to invest four bits. Neither shalt thou devour all thy savings at cotillion parties and balls; nor waste thy substance by improvidence and neglect.

American Nominations! FOR PRESIDENT, MILLARD FILLMORE...

Curiosity—Our friend Francis J. Grey of this county, has left at our office two eggs which were laid by the same hen...

There will be a meeting of the American party at their Hall, on Thursday night, the 8th of May.

The Cincinnati Enquirer asserts that an attempt has been made to bully Senator Douglas, and that Senator Crittenden was the first to make an unprovoked attack upon him.

We claim to be the exponent of the views and principles of the people.—Age Stop sir!—not quite so fast.

The Phoenix Hotel.—The property in this city, known as the Phoenix Hotel, was this day sold at public auction.

We have everything to gain and nothing to lose by a full, free, fearless and independent discussion of all the political issues of the day.—Age

Every foreign ally of the Sag Nicht party asserts and claims for his own native land the very policy and principle which the American party asserts and claims for America.

The Age is peculiarly ill natured and splanic in its remarks upon the efforts of this gentleman, at Colemansville, in reply to Mr. Arthur, the Sag Nicht candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney, in this district.

But, with a strange inconsistency, those same foreigners and the demagogues who court their votes, to help themselves to get into office and fatten at the public crib, affect to condemn and cannot sufficiently execrate the principle that native born Americans should rule America.

This is the heading of another article in the Age, announcing that SAM is dying. When the English King Charles the second was about to yield up the ghost, with that exquisite urbanity which was his most remarkable characteristic, it is said that he apologized to his attendants for having been such an unconscious time dying.

And sir! that announcement will continue to be made, when Sag Nichtism shall be remembered only, as one of those monstrous and baneful errors, which for a time deluded a portion of the American people, but was finally dispelled by the light and power of truth.

That Americans should rule their own country; and guard their own institutions and liberties; and that they should not entrust the rule of their country, nor the guardianship of their liberties and institutions to foreign hands, are principles, so obviously founded in truth, in reason, in right, in the very nature of political society, and the constitution—so universally recognized and acted upon by all nations, in all times, that you might as well attempt to reverse the immutable laws of nature, as hope to see those principles perish or fail to control the future policy of this country.

The march of truth may be slow; it may be retarded by the opposition of its foes; but yet it is ever onward, strewn its path with the wrecks of error, until the sun of victory rises full orb to shine forever upon it.

Designing demagogues and mistaken men may, by their arts and hostility, thwart and delay for a time the inauguration of the principles of the American party, as the settled and permanent policy of this country, but they cannot avoid it. While they are scheming and opposing, those principles are silently and steadily working their way in the public mind, like the imperceptible yet all potent and revivifying influences of spring, which despite the chilling opposition of winter, "lingering in her lap," are causing the face of mother Earth to bloom spontaneously with verdure and blossoms—the sure promise of a future harvest.

Every foreign ally of the Sag Nicht party asserts and claims for his own native land the very policy and principle which the American party asserts and claims for America.

The Irishman tells you that the hereditary curse of Ireland, the cause of her miseries and misfortunes is that she has been and is ruled by a foreign people—that it is the tread of the Saxon on her soil that blights the prospects of the Emerald Isle. Only, he tells you, let Ireland be ruled by her own native sons, who can best understand her interests, and whose every impulse is true to her honor and renown, then Ireland will be free and happy, and her sons no longer compelled to leave her green shores to seek in other lands the home they should find in their own.

Yet, with a strange inconsistency, those same foreigners and the demagogues who court their votes, to help themselves to get into office and fatten at the public crib, affect to condemn and cannot sufficiently execrate the principle that native born Americans should rule America.

native land, he is denounced by these same men, as if he were guilty of a heinous political crime. But Americans cannot much longer be deluded into the belief that they have not the same clear and exclusive right to rule their country, which foreigners of all other lands claim to have to rule theirs.

Masonic Lecture.—Wm. R. Webb, Esqr., delivers a lecture on Masonry, at the Lodge Room, in this place, commencing at 3 o'clock, this evening.

We see by the above that the whilom "Reporter for the Country Press" is again in his element. Mr. Webb was the American County Elector, for Scott county, last year, and did good service as the result of the election proved.

The Raleigh North Carolina Register says, that 22, out of 37 political papers in North Carolina, including one which is, at present, neutral, have raised the flag of "FILLMORE and DONELSON."

Another Erie war. ERIE, April 25.—A street fight occurred between young Walker and a Mr. Cochran. Cochran was whipped, and from this grew a general row, the Constitution newspaper office being gutted and burned. The rioters are firing a cannon, and it is proposed to destroy the houses of the railroad men.

Erie, April 26.—The mob of last night, after destroying the newspaper office, proceeded to the house of Mr. Walker, from which some one fired twice upon them. No one was injured. An attack was made with stones, &c., but on learning that there were women in the house, the rioters withdrew.

This is a new edition of the Erie Railroad war renewed in consequence of the Legislature re-chartering the Erie and North-East Railroad.

Why Mr. Fillmore is Popular. The reason why Mr. Fillmore has so strong a hold upon the affections and confidence of the conservative elements of the country is undoubtedly to be found in the fact, that he has followed the illustrious example of Clay and Webster, and ever proved himself to be a national man.

It is worthy of remark that the advocates and supporters of Mr. Fillmore in the States which were but a few years since the scene of secession and disunion—the journals that have held up his fame have ever teemed with patriotic union expression, and the politicians, who have stumped in his name, have invariably been the defenders of our national integrity against the assaults of fire-eaters and Southern rights men.

He has been known as a public man through conservative mediums, his history shows no bending to section but a continual worship of the whole country, his political action has never been indefinite but always practical, his political fastes have ever been for such honorable measures as ensure to the prosperity and the durability of the nation.

With a platform or without a platform no section of the republic would fear Mr. Fillmore's administration, for every section has observed his antecedents and known that he would deal equal and exact justice in constitutional balance. And such a character among patriotic conservative men—men, some of whom hate the fugitive slave law with a perfect hatred, and others of whom love the institution with more than local and interested love—has brought about the circumstance of this new party's nominating a leader of one of the old parties for its candidate for the Presidency.

Our sheep-raising community will do well to notice the advertisement of Mr. T. R. Stevens, wool carding. Abominable outrage at Henry, Ill. The [Lacon Gazette] gives the particulars of an outrage that was perpetrated in the town of Henry, on Tuesday, the 22d.

prosecute botanical studies. When a quarter of a mile above the city, on the bluff, a creature in the shape of a man overtook the little party and violently seized one of the pupils, but she escaped from his hold; he then caught Miss T., and with one hand held her by the arm and with a drawn dirk-knife in the other hand, threatened to kill her. She endeavored in vain to release herself from his grasp and made an outcry, with the hope that certain men she saw not far off would observe them and come to their rescue.

He then caught her by the throat and choked her till she was nearly black, at the same time repeating his threat that he would kill her; and then dragged her on the ground several rods, released his fiendish grasp and fled.

In the struggle to wrest the knife from the villain, Miss Throop had her hand badly cut and mangled, and she was severely injured and bruised on the neck and other parts of the body.

Miss Throop is a finely educated, amiable and beautiful young lady, and this brutal attack on her has left an impression on her mind that never will be effaced.
